MIDWOOD HIGH SCHOOL
DR. JACOB M. ROSS

JUNE 1953
PRINCIPAL

EDITORIAL.....

Soon time will have written another chapter in the book of each member of the class of '53, for graduation day approaches and we Midwoodites will find ourselves freshmen in various colleges, part of the working group, and members of the military forces.

Our destinies are scattered and, "For All We Know We May Never Meet Again," but the close experiences shared by us will long be remembered and will serve as the binding tie to our class.

Four years of sound academic training combined with the understanding of a competent faculty ear-mark our class. During these past four years, through our patient instructors, we have learned by doing, those attitudes, qualities, and values which are characteristic of the Democratic principles of all free men.

We, as students, have been taught not to allow the importance of material acquisitions to supersede the moral and ethical values which truly make for an abiding success.

We students have been fortunate in having Dr. Ross for our Principal. Under his administrative policies and his advisory capabilities, Midwood has become an outstanding high school. His personal interest in us, as individuals, has created a close tie between the office of principal and student body.

The step which we are about to take is a major one, for we leave our closely sheltered school home to face the insecure outside world. In these times of world conflict, it is hard to say that we face a bright tomorrow. The tomorrow yet to come is based upon today, the present; and as high school graduates, we find the task of molding that bright tomorrow in our own hands. As young people, we must devote our youth, our ideals, and our energies towards making that secure and happy future. To have it we must earn it.

Our course of study has been intense and varied. Some of the subject matter will become a part of us, part of our daily existence; the rest, a part of our cultural background. Yet, success in living is not measured in terms of book learning, but by the basic understanding of one's fellow man, the basic respect for one's fellow man, and the basic feelings towards one's fellow man. In our school the opportunity for broadening relationships with others has been extensive.

The fact that we are leaving Midwood is no longer a dream, but has materialized into a reality. We are the fruits of the labors of parents, teachers, and friends. The success of their teachings depends upon us.

The spring term of '53 draws to a close, and with it end the frustrations, failures, and disappointments of the class of '53. Now that we have reached the summing up, these things seem trivial in comparison to the road ahead. We face the future armed with dreams and high hopes, no burden too heavy to bear, no height too high to climb, and for our determination to go forward we say, "Thank you, dear Midwood."

DEAR DIARY,

It's all over, out, and done with. It certainly was some heck of a job, but we made it and to you, the Senior class, we present the bad results of good intentions.

In February, we the Artistic and Lettered started out to create a yearbook: Ingredients . . . bad proofs, Dubey humor, a pinch of faculty advice, mix with Ed. notes, slap together and let settle. Whamie! A YEARBOOK . . . (So we thought).

We started out by sending notices around to those interested in Epilog. "Come to the Art Squad Office," we cordially invited. To those of you who are still looking and wondering where the office is located, you were right the first time. It's that closet door in the wall on the fourth floor. The Art Squad, Midwood's closet, minus moth-balls and hangers, housed Epilog during its creative stage.

In order not to interfere with the budding Bohemians, we were given a corner of this room to do our work. Since most of our work calls for quite a bit of typing we expected to find at least two typewriters. Instead we found one dilapidated Underwood, yellowed with age and mother of at least fifteen Epilogs. Mr. Mandell kindly donated to the cause, one used, well, slightly used, typewriter.

To be said of the Epilog staff:

"Into the Air" by I Was There

In response to our plea for talented writers and artists, many came. Many are called and few are chosen; yet even fewer remained with the activity.

Flippin' with Zippin, the literary staff started out with a bang. The Epilog jewel, Dubey the ruby, loaned his "Floogie Bug" and spare minutes between Senior Council and Argus April Fool, to the literary staff. By combining the talents of these two people we got sense and nonsense for our book.

Are some of your services missing from under your picture?

Miller and Meisner are the girls to see

About that missing activity.

To be said of Rozi's Epilog's Art Editor

The Art's the thing that made our book

'Cause most of our patrons don't read, but look. . . .

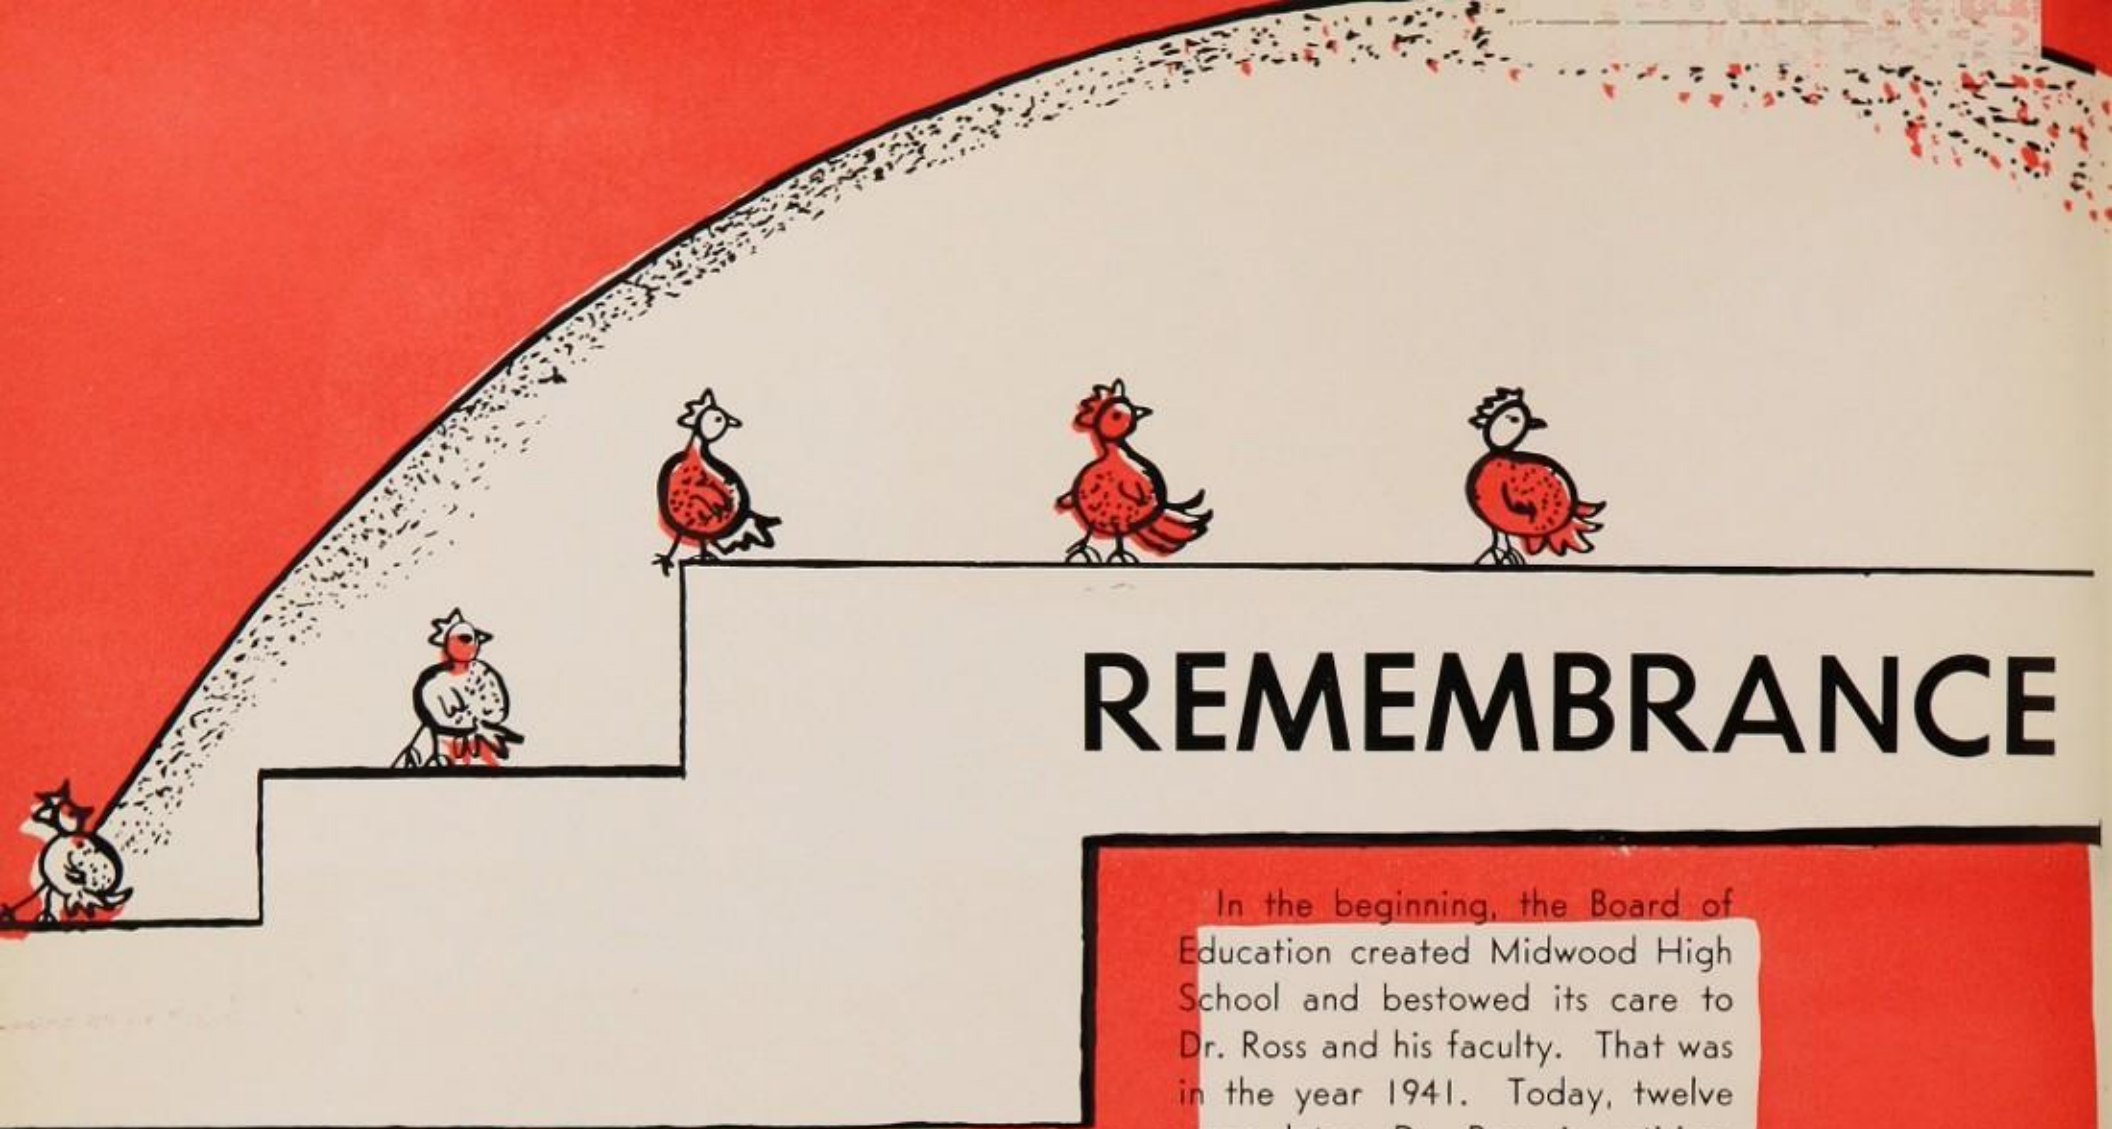

Who can forget Mordy and Charlie, the original "We are a Camera" guys who left spots before your eyes? Whenever I wanted to find out how far Epilog had progressed with the picture-taking I'd have to sojourn down to the first floor dark-room, to hold forth a session with these two.

Oh, you want to know what I had to do with it? They called me the Editor-in-Chief and at times a few other choice appellations . . . I had no specific job, just anything that cropped up; typing, filing, editing, counting characters (not Seniors), writing, drawing lines. . . .

You know diary, it really has been a lot of fun. I hope you like it. . . .

Love and Kisses,

Conrada

REMEMBRANCE

In the beginning, the Board of Education created Midwood High School and bestowed its care to Dr. Ross and his faculty. That was in the year 1941. Today, twelve years later, Dr. Ross is retiring, and well may he look with pride upon the work he leaves behind him.

Between that beginning and the present, Midwood has changed from a new, young school to an old respected one. First events have become established Midwood traditions.

One of the important first events was the establishment of the Midwood Student Government modelled after the municipal set-up. Elections were held for the top officers, Mayor, Chief Justice of the Student Court, and Comptroller, and a constitution was voted upon. The different candidates were representatives of the Blue, White, Liberal and New Deal parties as well as independents.

This student government has since gradually evolved. The court has disappeared as has the party system, the latter after much controversy. "We must have student participation!" cried some. How concerned everyone was during the first party-less primary when student interest was so low! How those worried officers would be amazed at the present crowded primaries, where twelve hopefuls vie for the privilege of running for office!

Argus, too, has changed from the first one full page issue pioneered by a small staff. From that beginning it has changed to a tabloid form and from a single page to an occasional ten. A faltering pioneer has become a venerable authority in scholastic press competitions.

However, at that time only a few activities were for the benefit of the students themselves. Today, there is not an interest that does not have some outlet in Midwood's set-up.

Midwood's opening practically coincided with the beginning of World War II and the efforts of Midwoodites were turned to the aid of their country. Senior Proms were given up, and pupils as well as teachers left for the armed services. In this tense atmosphere Dr. Ross maintained his wise and calm supervision. Marshalling the efforts of students and faculty, he plunged Midwood into an all-out war effort.

OF THINGS PAST

Bond drives were held, first aid courses given, gala carnivals staged and two ambulances donated to the war effort. Midwood's blackboards were even adorned with Japanese letters, as a course was given to prepare the students for military service. Students were hosts to sailors from the Maquis, the French Resistance Forces, and in the meantime Dr. Ross' column in Argus reassured the parents of the safety of their children.

During this critical time under Dr. Ross' leadership the school continued to run smoothly. The teachers and department heads were picked and the reputation of Midwood continued to grow as did her student body.

The war ended in 1945 soon after the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Midwood's return to peacetime was marked by the establishment of an award to commemorate the country's great war-time leader. Teachers returned from military service and life resumed on an even keel, with sing, spring concerts, Arguses and athletics. The basketball team, the first athletic group, was joined by the fencing, tennis and soccer squads. Then, after much controversy and searching to the ends of the world for a coach, the dreamed-of football team became a reality.

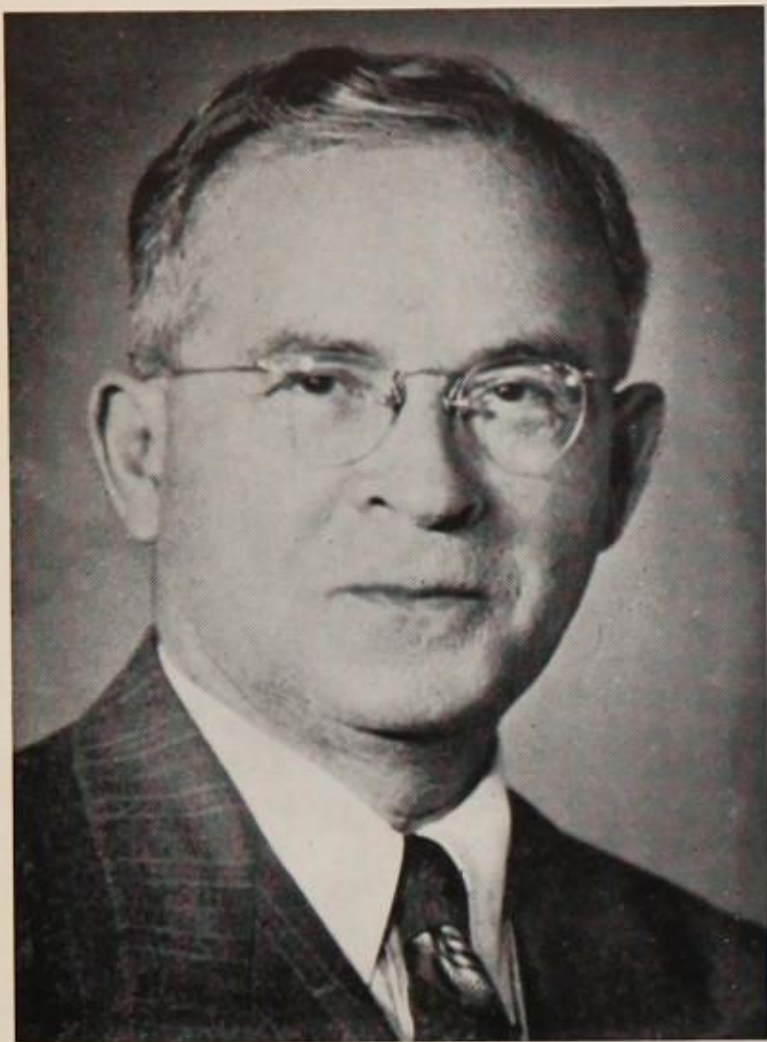

This calm was shattered in 1950 by the teachers' extra-curricular activities strike. Feeling underpaid and overworked, the teachers refused to give up time for any out of class activities. Dr. Ross kept order despite the confusion and during the invasion of Midwood by other Brooklyn high schools, made sure that no rebellious student escaped and joined the ranks.

After a year and a half an agreement was reached between the teachers and the Mayor, a truce was declared, and activities resumed. The next event in Midwood was a gala tenth anniversary celebration. Now our class of June 1953 and Dr. Ross are leaving together.

It is hard for us, who entered the school only four years ago, to realize the tremendous changes that have taken place. Under the guiding hand of Dr. Ross Midwood has increased in size and in stature, and now belongs in the forefront among the schools of the nation.

Dear Seniors:

As head of our large school family I have been leading this beautiful high school since February 1941 when it was opened as a new high school. No other high schools have been built since 1941. I have seen Midwood grow from an infant school to a full-blown throbbing educational center for adolescents.

At the end of twelve years in Midwood, and fifty years of educational service to the schools of our great city, I am ready to retire and hand over the torch of leadership to a younger man. My years at Midwood have been very happy, busy and satisfying ones.

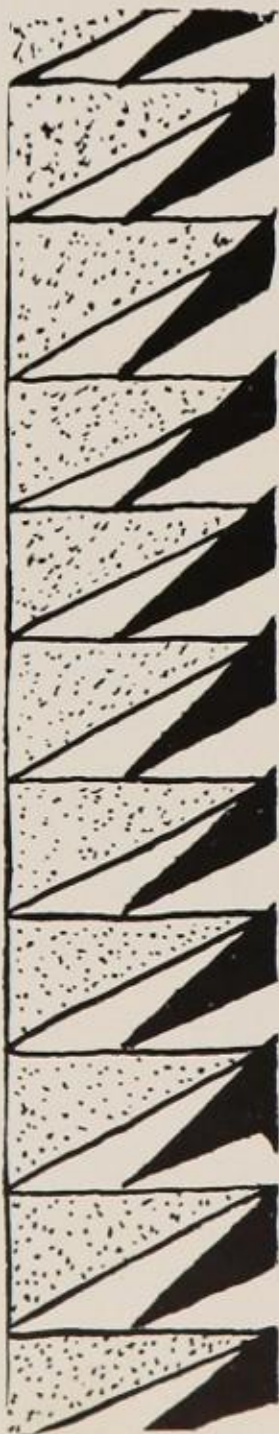

My valedictory goes to your class, since I am being graduated from Midwood with you. Your presence for the past four years and your willingness to serve in every way with your teachers and myself, have inspired me to wholehearted service—that of guiding you young men and women to lead efficient, happy, and serviceable lives.

I also wish to thank your parents from the bottom of my heart for the encouragement and inspiration I have received from their genuine desire to cooperate with the school to make it a distinctive educational force in the lives of their children and in the life of the community.

You have helped me during the past four years to develop Midwood into a living American school that will continue to educate its youth in the American tradition, for the preservation of all that we Americans hold dear. No principal could wish for more. Godspeed to you is the wish of my dear wife and myself.

Your friend and principal,

Jacob M. Ross.

Long Remembered

Dear Doctor Ross and Miss Kroeber:

Looking in retrospect upon our four years at Midwood, we find that we owe an outstanding part of our development and growth to your able guidance. Without your discerning counsel and wise recommendations, our careers here could not have been as successful as they have proven.

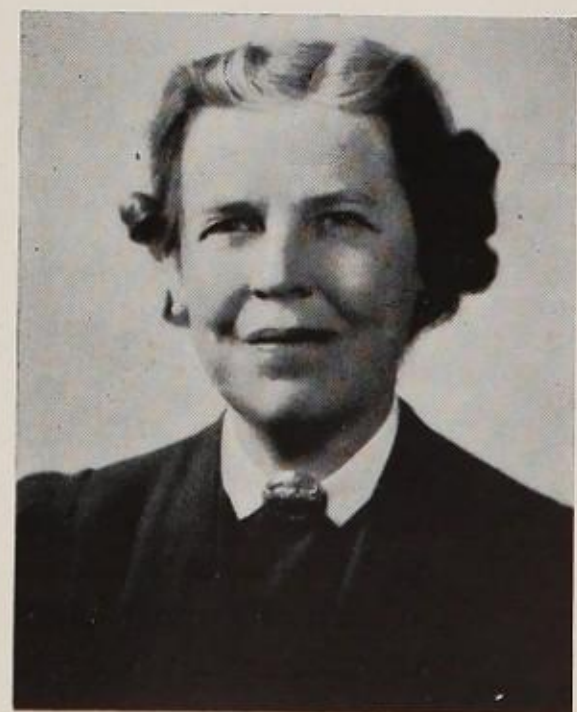

We have been fortunate in attending a school in which equal stress is placed upon scholarship and better living. Not only have you taught us the values of formal education, but you have inculcated in us the credo of belonging to a world of equal rights and common goals. Through the cooperation of the faculty and students, a working democracy has found voice within our own school. As a result of your capable leadership, intelligent, well-rounded individuals have evolved, prepared to continue with their chosen tasks.

We, the members of the class of June, 1953, are proud to have attended Midwood under your direction. On behalf of the alumni and present students, we should like to take this opportunity to express our sincerest appreciation to you for all you have done.

This year marks the end of your long careers of guidance and leadership, but for us your works and teachings are just beginning. The ideas you have instilled in us will serve us throughout our lives. We wish you happiness and good health, and may the best of luck be with you in all future undertakings.

Sincerely,

The Senior Class of June, 1953

ONLY YESTERDAY

We came to Midwood nine hundred strong, a little lost, somewhat frightened, and very bewildered. The conventional Freshman jokes were played on us; we were sold elevator passes, swimming pool permits, and told wild rumors of that ever-present, yet non-existent fifth floor. We didn't know quite what to make of the place. Now we are leaving, a bit ashamed of the sentimental and sad feelings that are becoming part of us. Now we reminisce, laugh at what we used to be and feel proud of what we are today.

.... There were those first days as Midwoodites. There was novelty in filling out delaney cards, program cards, transportation cards, and G.O. cards. (Today they're regarded as just another way of getting writer's cramp.) There was a shock as we realized, "Gee, it's DARK when we get out of school." There were many outstanding events—the first day of the teachers' strike when other schools marched on Midwood to persuade the students to leave school and join them and we realized that the policemen really didn't believe us and weren't going to let us go to school. So, everyone took advantage of the situation and had an impromptu holiday. Good thing the weather was nice that day.

Then extra-currics ended. We fought for the teacher's cause and hoped they'd get the raise they wanted, but school seemed very dull without anything but work. This happened just as we were becoming a part of school activities.

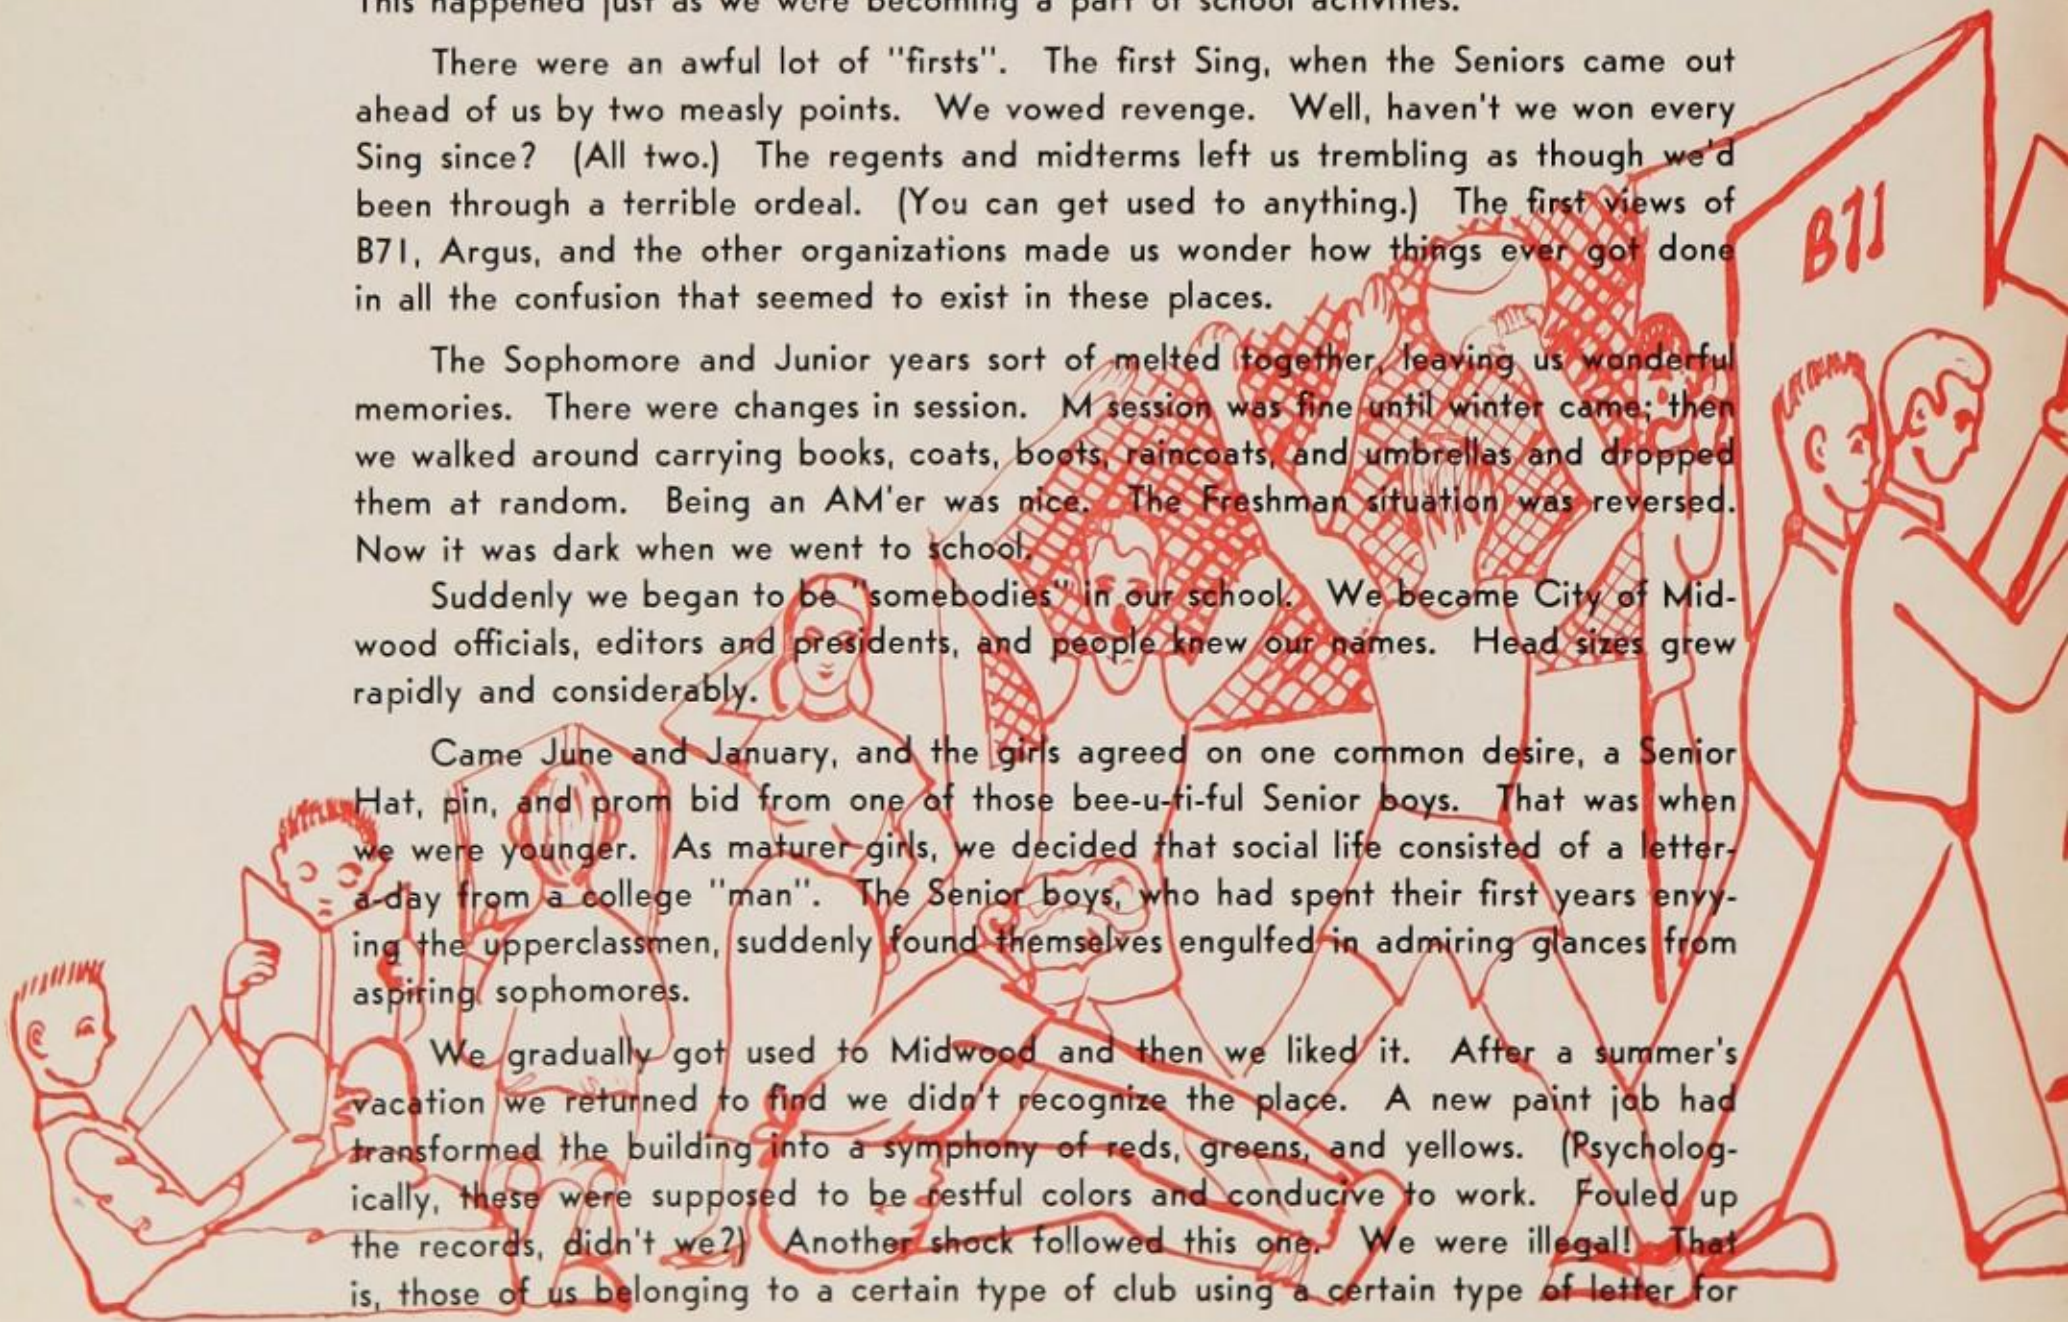

There were an awful lot of "firsts". The first Sing, when the Seniors came out ahead of us by two measly points. We vowed revenge. Well, haven't we won every Sing since? (All two.) The regents and midterms left us trembling as though we'd been through a terrible ordeal. (You can get used to anything.) The first views of B71, Argus, and the other organizations made us wonder how things ever got done in all the confusion that seemed to exist in these places.

The Sophomore and Junior years sort of melted together, leaving us wonderful memories. There were changes in session. M session was fine until winter came; then we walked around carrying books, coats, boots, raincoats, and umbrellas and dropped them at random. Being an AM'er was nice. The Freshman situation was reversed. Now it was dark when we went to school.

Suddenly we began to be "somebodies" in our school. We became City of Midwood officials, editors and presidents, and people knew our names. Head sizes grew rapidly and considerably.

Came June and January, and the girls agreed on one common desire, a Senior Hat, pin, and prom bid from one of those bee-u-ti-ful Senior boys. That was when we were younger. As maturer girls, we decided that social life consisted of a letter-a-day from a college "man". The Senior boys, who had spent their first years envying the upperclassmen, suddenly found themselves engulfed in admiring glances from aspiring sophomores.

We gradually got used to Midwood and then we liked it. After a summer's vacation we returned to find we didn't recognize the place. A new paint job had transformed the building into a symphony of reds, greens, and yellows. (Psychologically, these were supposed to be restful colors and conducive to work. Fouled up the records, didn't we?) Another shock followed this one. We were illegal! That is, those of us belonging to a certain type of club using a certain type of letter for its name. After that announcement, jackets, keys and pins that hadn't been worn for months appeared in school. (Sons of liberty, arise!)

We were proud of a lot of things about our school. One, above others, was the annual presentation of the FDR Memorial Award. We got to see and hear some famous and inspiring people. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt came to Midwood, and the entire A.M. session waited for an hour in the hot sun just to see her car drive up. Some of us also got to hear her unforgettable speech. Jackie Robinson came also. Dr. Ralph Bunche couldn't make it but the rules were changed so that he could receive the award which the students had voted him. The award, and what it meant, was the subject of an editorial in a college newspaper. The writers were very impressed by the fact that Justice William Douglas had come in second in one election. They felt that many adults wouldn't even know who he was. We pointed with pride to the editorial and realized that our small efforts to promote FDR's ideals had not gone unnoticed.

School wasn't always serious. There were lighter moments when weird and startling fads and fashion dominated our every hour. Things that were "real George" when we were sophs became "crazy, man" as we became Seniors. The girls went through various animal stages, with poodles, ponytails, and ducktails, walking the halls. The boys adopted the collegiate look with white bucks, grey flannels, and crew cuts. The girls did them one better with bright knee socks. Then knitting became the fifth major on many a girl's program as she walked around with a pair of unfinished argyles dangling from one hand and everything else balanced in the other. Slacks became an issue, and the waking thought of some girls became, "Is it snowing hard enough today?"

In the midst of our stay, Midwood celebrated a birthday. Our school was now ten years old. Anniversary buttons were sold and one of us made the discovery that from far enough away they actually looked like Senior pins. We laughed at things we didn't remember, and roared at those we did when the anniversary skits were given.

The PTA candy counter opened, with all proceeds going to the Scholarship Fund. Many a diet lost to the argument that "the money was for a good cause." With world tension mounting, we began to have atom bomb drills. Some were orderly affairs with everyone marching into the hall and remaining there until a given signal. Others were more fun. Someone would call "flash" over the PA system and everyone would dive under his desk (teacher included). Glasses were broken, heads banged, and knees scraped in the shuffles.

Then we were Seniors (always with a capital letter). This was what we had been waiting for but suddenly the future looked dim. Things we'd never heard of like college boards, and college interviews, and senior recommendations, and coaching (for a very reasonable price), appeared out of nowhere and loomed before us. We realized that we didn't know how to walk, talk, dress, or take exams. There were serious things to be done; we were now deciding our futures. We chose our college, hoping they'd choose us. Or we asked about job prospects.

Now we leave, a smaller and closer group than the one that entered so long ago. The time has gone too quickly. We share hundreds of common memories and experiences. Now we leave, but we have each left some part of us here. We are older, wiser, and able to face the future with confidence.

SO BIG

Two proud looking creatures strutted towards us, sporting strange hats of deep blue, which radiated a glow suggesting that "They Knew What They Wanted." As they came into view they began to take the shape of human beings. We asked them who they were and in unison they sang out, "Why, we're SENIORS!" Our discussion was abruptly curtailed by a man who came stomping down the hall, and who, placing a firm hand on the shoulders of our two newly made friends, grunted, "Ya know dat you people have committed a major misdemeanor? Comin' late to class can end you all up in 'An American Tragedy!' " Our friends scuttled off to their classes, but, alas and alack, the first period had just ended and everybody was sauntering into home-room.

The excessive buzz of activity taking place in these home-rooms served to show us that a senior lives in "An Age Of ANXIETY." There was a maze of clashing activity being conducted at the same time; we had to vote for Senior Celebs, decide which hall should be honored with our presence on prom nite, fill our senior activity cards, look at everybody's pictures from beloved "Will-Art", and do three S.S. lessons and two math assignments. To top it all off, our President, with a lean and hungry look, began the collection of Senior dues.

Only the Senior knows "For Whom the Bell Tolls." It tolls for him. It is at this time that he loses his identity and assumes the role of all the other milling midkids, maintaining, however, his unending feeling of importance as a SENIOR. It is now that he connives and utilizes his painfully acquired "tricks of the trade," a genuine mark of his sophistication.

One of these tactics is the using of one book cover for all his classes. This is not a miserly act on his part, but rather an inevitable one after he has been drained of all available funds—the price he pays for being a Senior.

Despite this penniless condition he manages to scrimp and save for exceedingly important investments such as ponies, midterms and English translations of the foreign language novels such as "El Capitan Venemo" or "Tartarin de Tarascon."

Who else but a Senior would have enough presence of mind to read a paragraph from the Encyclopedia Brittanica in place of wading through the assigned five hundred page novel about Shakespeare? Who would have the intelligence to look in the back of the trig or algebra book to find the answers? Who else would have the daring to hand in his older brother's physics notebook at collection time? Or to do the crossword puzzle behind his chem book? None, of course, but the Senior. For he has forgotten about ninety's and ninety-nine's and is now only concerned with avoiding "The Scarlet Letter."

As they bide their time, waiting for "Their Finest Hour," the Seniors' day is an effervescent one, full of the fun and laughter that marks their term as "The Celestial Seniors."

INFORMATION PLEASE!

The information herein included is top secret and is being revealed for the first time. This is how it was gathered. We snared one unsuspecting member of each class, pulled them all into the library, and fired questions. For their replies they searched the shelves for appropriate volumes. We extend our thanks to our unwitting victims and to the helpful authors who wrote such nice titles.

I SELL WHAT I WRITE

In Midwood, "Argus" is socially the place to be. Everyone who is anyone has tried his luck in "Argus". All day long the little newspaper office is filled with people busily engaged in writing, reading, or finding a scoop. The office contains a moose head, coconut face and an invisible pink elephant. Every nose for news from the Editor-in-Chief to the copy-girl is anxious to make the monthly issue as good as possible.

Those on the news staff are continually after teachers for a story and are continually being thrown out of every office from Mr. Van's on the fourth floor to Dr. Ross' on the main floor. The feature staff is kept going with amusement reviews, annual stories and the jargon of Mid-Moods. The sports staff features banner heads for the basketball games and $\frac{1}{8}$ " type for the football games.

Miss Mulhern, the faculty adviser, is proud of her kids; she sees to it that "Argus" makes a fine showing.

Midwood's Pseudo-Intellectuals gather around Mrs. Venit for their daily meetings of "Road Ahead," the Social Studies magazine. It's a place where everyone knows more than the next and wants his ideas to be used. It often resembles the Social Studies Debating Team instead of a magazine. Mrs. Venit more than often has the last word.

The members have a good time, though, writing for their semi-annual publication. Their work includes a lot of research, but there is a great thrill in going to interview some famous personality. The issue includes features and stories on current events and history.

Although it might not be Montmartre, or Greenwich Village, Midwood does have a Bohemian Quarter—formally known as "Patterns"—the literary art magazine. If you are inclined to break away from convention and enjoy the freedoms of uninhibitedness, "Patterns" is the place for you. Its members squat on the floor, partake of snacks, wear odd clothes and give themselves up to "La Vie Boheme." The magazine has long had a reputation of being the home of fanciful dreamers who spend their time with their heads in the clouds writing poetry. Outsiders with material to submit gravely fear for the fate of their little masterpieces. Mrs. Haas is the faculty adviser of the literary staff and Mr. Ross is adviser to the hard-working art staff.

Poetry, short stories and essays are written for each issue, usually on a professional basis. Of course, the main trend is toward the morbid and dreary. The art staff, eager to paint for humorous works, spends its time vainly attempting to convert the literary group. (Rumor has it that the "Patterns'" staffs are quite normal, but to spread this around would be to ruin the magazine's reputation!)

The Mathematics and Science brains meet to write "Formula", the publication of those departments. The book is filled with mathematical paradoxes and problems which baffle the imagination of the more ordinary students. A Science fiction story is usually included.

"Biolog" is the Biology and General Science Department's magazine. Numerous articles and pictures of scientific interest are to be found in the issues. Included are experiments, reports, strange facts and stories. Mrs. Friedland is the faculty adviser. The publication is connected with the Biology lab (gas chamber for frogs).

BLUEPRINT

THE SOUND AND THE FURY

Every day four thousand students hurry past the bulletin board on the side of the first floor hallway without so much as a glance at it. With good reason too, because seven months out of the school year there really isn't much to see on it. But something happens just about the first week in October—the bulletin board becomes divided into four parts, one for each grade, and a sign goes up which reads "Sing."

It is just about then that a whole new approach of walking through the hall begins. People don't hurry by anymore; their pace takes on a slow, casual air; they stop in front of the metal enclosed square and gaze excitedly looking for notices. The word "sing" echoes down the hall once more. Faces begin sparkling with inspiration; conversations become busy with ideas, fantasies and impressions. Everybody is working! Midwood has a three-month revolution.

The first sing meeting is usually like a large party, the kind that could only be held at a hotel. Where else could anyone fit 300 talking, laughing and screaming Seniors? A great deal of work is always accomplished at the first meeting. This work consists of quieting the mob. Once this is effected we try very hard to elect a chairman, leader, pianist, and all their assistants. After everyone has signed his "nom-de-plume" to a piece of paper, we adjourn.

Then we begin to meet at homes, and how those homes suffer! The rooms begin to have an impenetrable fog. The students of higher learning put their massive minds together, stuff themselves with all available refreshments, and try to come up with a theme and lyrics. After all, since "Freshmankins" and "Detectives who can't find a school they are standing in" have been used already, it is quite hard to find something original. Then, once again we have it! Out of the smoke-filled din comes originality once more!! Psychiatrists! Freud!! We score once again!!! The theme is finally conceived.

Now all we have left to write are a few songs, and after all, what are a few songs anyway? The realization of how many songs a few is does not strike immediately. We expect them to come pouring in, and they do, and we read them, and we search vainly for someone who doesn't rhyme "June" and "moon". Finally we scrape together a few ditties and gallantly submit them to our "Brooks Atkinson" of Midwood, Mrs. Bella Tillis. Mrs. Tillis is the golden Hercules of Sing: producer, director, critic, and actress all rolled into one. When she smiles, we know we have something good. When she doesn't, well, that's when we start writing all over again.

Our script is completed at last and we all become psychiatrists of high degree trying to put some poor Senior's mind back in the right place. Everything is on paper and the rehearsals begin. Three times a week we find any available corner in Midwood and "sing"—off key, on key, wrong key, anything goes, but we sing. After several rehearsals, solos are distributed to the deserving and we are all prepared to go on stage. Did I say prepared? Hah! The procedure takes at least a full day, with everyone shoving to sit in the first row, and casualties constantly occurring from falls from the top step.

The staging begins, the script loses its identity, the leader's arm begins to sag, the piano keys wither, and the stage lights are our only sunshine for two weeks, but the spirit is always there. Everyone remembers how it was when we were "Freshmankins" in the land of Oz. We didn't quite win then; we were second by two points. As Juniors we were detectives looking for our lost school. We won that year, and we liked it. Now we're Seniors, and the fight to win glows from everyone's face and all of a sudden the night of December twelfth is upon us.

* * * * *

Everyone stood dressed in his white shirt and eye patch in the gym waiting for some last words of encouragement. Nervously the group took places on the stage. There was the introduction, while everyone was silent. Then the curtain flew open and the Senior class of neuro-psychiatry 1953 sang its way to victory.

AS I SAW IT

MIDWOOD

Cantaloups and razor blades! It is nearly over . . . the high school episode approaches the last curtain; we take our final bow and leave, gracefully for the most part.

As I sit here, taking apart my Senior hat and meditating upon the infinite scheme of things, my thoughts continually creep back over what has transpired, and how I took it.

The Great Migration . . . ah, yes . . . from the glory of a grammar school senior to the ignominy of a iddy biddy freshie. Gad, the humiliation! I looked up to everyone that year . . . at the big old seniors, the room numbers, the loud-speakers, the posters. I saw things from the underside then. If I only knew then what I know now. Of course I tried. . . .

One day I came across a Senior in the Argus office, idly perusing an ancient, leather-bound volume of Pogo. "Oh great and learned oracle," sez I, "What have you to teach me?"

"Away, child, you vex me," sez he.

I am not one to discourage easily. "Illustrious cannon-fodder," sez I, "leave a bit of wisdom for posterity. Import to me a wee morsel of your boundless experience."

He closed his book, closed his eyes, and said, "Small one, long ago there came to Midwood a freshman who had served six years in the Marines. This presented to the average senior a horrible enigma. Imagine, a freshman with a beard! Well, this guy went about dating senior girls, selling driving licenses, and waving his G.I. Bill Cadillac around. Finally, he quit school and went back to the Marines . . . he said the food was better. So don't give up hope, my boy. Remember, even we Seniors have our bad days. After all, 'little freshies from big seniors grow' . . . also "never let an elephant sit on you . . . it's unhealthy." With this, he assumed a Yoga stance conducive to penitence, and promptly went into a transom.

It seems sophomores spend most of the year reconnoitering sideways, out of the corners of their eyes. We as sophs, learned. We discovered the secrets of algebra, and how to solve involved equations mentally within seconds after handing in the exam paper. We acquired great manual dexterity in snatching a hot plate, milk, dessert, napkins, a piece of old but strong bread, salt, mustard, straws, and a wooden fork, at a dead run, simultaneously counting out thirty-eight cents in pennies and nickles. I once saw a classmate portaging a large musical instrument, books, more books, a ponderous piece of apparatus borrowed from the lab, riding a bicycle, and eating a cho-cho pop.

DR. ROSS IS THE GREAT EMANCIPATOR

The luckiest boy in the world was a fellow who was apprehended whilst smoking in a restricted area by one with authority, to put it mildly. As he stood there, quivering, he was ordered to raise his foot, beneath which rested the offending butt. It stuck to his shoe.

At last came the great enlightenment. The veil was lifted . . . we gazed upon the true goal. It became evident that the only real achievement was . . . the nirvana of the high school set . . . Seniorism! With this prospect in view, the Junior looked comfortably down upon his surroundings with two distinctly observable attitudes.

1: Of superiority: "I'm almost there!"

2: Of despair: "I'll never make it!"

The Dean is my shepherd, O woe is me,

He maketh me to shut my big mouth,

He restoreth my ice cream wrapper.

He leadeth me to the end of my sanity, where my fountain pen leaks.

He issueth a pass; yea, tho' I walk through the halls late to classes,

I shalt fear no teacher . . . my pass and my senior button, they comfort me.

Surely, homework and confusion shall follow me all the days of my life,

And I shall dwell upon pins and needles forever.

Finally, reaching the ultimate in the Cosmic All, I close my eyes, and revel in the joys of being suave, sophisticated, and penniless.

" . . . September 15-19, Freshman Orientation Week . . ."

"the moving finger writes, and having writ, moves on . . ."

Let us move on . . .

"Hup, tew, tharee, fo' . . ."

. . . And on.

SENIOR WILL

We, the Senior class of June, 1953, having spent all our money on hats, dues, pins, and proms, find ourselves unable to leave any objects of great value to our beloved ex-mentors. In fact, we haven't even the available money to leave them books, so we hope they will be content with only the titles.

Without more ado, we bequeath to:

Mr. Kaufman	My Mortal Enemy
Mr. Doskow	Call of the Wild
Mr. Fuchs	Thirty Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary
Mr. Hirsch	A Lost Lady
Mrs. Zeiger	The Child From Five to Ten
Mr. Dank	The Pit
Mr. Kesten	Moby Dick
Mr. Gottlieb	Pavillion of Women
Miss Mulhern	School for Scandal
Mr. Feldman	The Amboy Dukes

Anything Can Happen

AND USUALLY DOES! . . .

Delaney cards . . . millions of them . . . indexes on which only a privileged few have been able to show their mark of distinction! Those few being the SENIORS, of course! Why should THEY follow the footsteps of the general run who write their home room numbers so tiny and light? Seniors, even down to the way they write their home room numbers, are inimitable, unusual and original. For example, 354 followed by an S with an overdose of wheat germ!

There are other ways of recognizing US. Comes the day when most lower classmen go around with headaches. Cause? The dazzling radiance emanating from the Senior Pins located at strategic spots on the Senior anatomy. Now, these pins are fine for the ego, but all of US anxiously await the delivery of the SENIOR HATS. After all those who ordered small and got large and all those who ordered large and got medium have switched for an hour or so, all faces develop that smug, satisfied look of superiority. Now, please don't think that the senior boys are so selfish they don't share their belongings . . . just take a look at the junior girls the next day! Soon after hats are distributed, if one were to check the pheasant farms, he might find the poor birds featherless . . . after all, we can only decorate our hats once . . . they can get new feathers anytime! I'll never forget the day I bumped into a heavy-hatted senior . . . poor thing had his head stuck in the door . . . couldn't get his hat through in time to catch up with his feet.

Midwood is quite a progressive school, you know; always tries to encourage individualism among its students. Well, if you'd like to see copies of everything from the UN building to the latest thing in fruit bowls, just come to our auditorium the day we have our Senior Hat contest. You may leave color blind, but you'll have seen creative youth at its fantastic best!

Elections! With as wonderful a class as we had, was it any wonder that we elected officers as cooperative and capable as they were? With Jay Arbeiter as Pres., Stu Millendorf as Veep, Sandy Brauner, Sec., Phyllis Weissglass as treasurer and Conrada Gill as Epilog editor, we were sure to have a fabulous term to finish our high school careers. They did a truly magnificent job and the Senior class of '53 salutes them!

About that time of the term, most of us were wondering how we would look in our caps and gowns . . . Will-Art Studios gave us a chance to find out. It was time for graduation pictures to be "took!" The boys walked into the office looking like a basket of well polished apples, with TIES no less. That was the day I met one senior gal who couldn't talk or her lipstick would smear. One had her head at a 16° angle with her shoulder (she had to keep her hair in line with the wind)! Well, we finally got the results. Our self-addressed envelopes were ripped open to find . . . proofs of a nature that made us wonder just exactly what they were trying to prove. But all's well that ends well and the finished products looked pretty good (especially to our close relatives).

I'm willing to bet that everybody remembers the wonderful job Phyllis Goody did as chairman of Senior Day. All of our celebrities, most popular, most likely to succeed, and others, were introduced and then we had that talent packed variety show. Spirits were high and every kid who worked to put on that show did his best to make it a bang-up success. Thanks!

Same goes for those who made our dance April 25th an evening that brought such fun and gaiety to the seniors that attended. The Rumpus Room alias Glamour Grove (better known as the girls' gym) really looked beautiful and added a festive air to the occasion.

Class night was stupendous now that we're speaking of it. Our show was the most terrific piece of dramatic work since Walt Disney filmed "The Three Caballeros." Our actors and actresses were all Academy Award winners. All kidding aside, we really loved every minute of it and we appreciate the months of hard work that made it as great as it was.

When June rolled around and all the senior's activities were coming to the final climax: the prom. "God, Give us Men!" became a great favorite with the senior girls. Don't laugh boys, we couldn't even recognize you under your disguises. Some poor boys grew beards and drew scars on their faces to evade bid-seeking Sally Sophomores. Well, everything worked out for everybody and everybody worked for everything.

Before we turned around, the term was over! Our High School careers were drawing to a close and all thoughts turned to graduation. Rehearsal followed rehearsal and we marched and sang for days. "Don't crane your heads looking for your relatives, keep looking straight ahead." That's what they told us but they shouldn't have worried. Since no one escaped it, you were probably blessed with one of our original Lilly Dache models in gowns that didn't quite fit. (The shoulders drooped and the sleeves were so long they had to be pinned up double.)

Then graduation! To the tune of something that sounded like Jingle Bells, we walked down the aisles. The Band played, and the orchestra orchestrated, the chorus sang and officials made speeches, the lucky kids got medals and the rest perspired!

It sure will be fun to reminisce at Alumni Day next year. We'll have plenty to talk about!

To Mrs. Rosman and Mr. Rogal:

It is difficult to put into words our feelings of sincere gratitude for the guidance and help you have given us in our most formative years. Your moral influence has ranked with that of our parents.

We offer our thanks to you for the things you have done to make our stay in Midwood so pleasant. Thanks for the patience you showed in explaining why we couldn't take three majors a term and graduate, and for arranging our programs so that college requirements could be met without taking seven majors in our senior term.

We know that on the rare occasions when you had to say "no" to our requests, it was always for our own good, as each class assignment was part of a carefully planned program.

We leave this school happy in the thought that our younger brothers and sisters will also be fortunate in having your help in handling and solving our problems.

Sincerely,

The Senior Class of June, 1953

Looking

Backward

To Mr. Shapiro and Miss Bradshaw:

By utilizing on our behalf, your extensive learning and vast experience, you have pointed out to us the better path to take.

Our thanks go out to you for a great many things. Thanks for being patient and kind when we forgot to hand in Senior Recommendation Cards on time or when we pleaded for "just one more application." Thanks for advising us in our choice of a college so that there would be fewer rejection slips. Thanks for letting us know how we did on the College Boards and telling us to "take 'em over again," when we didn't do too well. But most of all, thanks for the guidance, assistance, and encouragement in this, our most trying time.

Sincerely,

The Senior Class of June, 1953

Moon And Six Pencils

We are alone in B71. We pause for a moment to gaze at the wall before us. The task we had set out to perform is now completed. We stop, thinking to ourselves, "How did this all begin? How did we become involved in this strange undertaking?"

Anita was sitting in S.S. 44 when suddenly Mr. Dobren's voice boomed out at her, "See me after class!" After the period was over she approached him cautiously. "Anita," he offered, "I have a wall for you."

"A wall!!" She cried, "For me!! Gee dad, thanks. But how?"

"Well, when the Board of Estimate checked their reports, they found that they had a spare wall in B71 which they decided to appropriate to some deserving student who could do what he wanted with it. Since I know that you're a good art student and a faithful follower of C.M. activities, I'm giving the job over to you."

She dashed up the four flights of stairs, staggered into the art squad room (a haven for the mad artists of Midwood) and blurted out those memorable words, "A wall! a wall! I've got a wall!"

Out from under a lettering brush crawled Renee. "They haven't given out one of those in about four years," she replied in amazement.

"But the task is too big for me alone," came Anita's plea for aid.

"You have come to the right person," replied Renee, her usual sense of modesty prevailing.

On Wednesday of regents week we began. Equipped with one 6-inch ruler and two 3B pencils (with no erasers), we started ruling in our margins. As Renee blocked off an area of 15'x6', Anita began sketching in the design.

The dinner hour was approaching when we finally decided to pack up for the day. On our way out of the room, two of Midwood's matrons happened to pass the open door. "Horrors!" one cried. "An outbreak of vandalism!" As the hurt wore off, we had a small suspicion that this little remark was just the beginning of a long line of such compliments.

In the weeks that followed we worked at a feverish pace. Despite the difficulties we had in scaling the walls in order to paint the upper areas of the mural, we loved every moment of it. Soon the news spread like wildfire throughout the art squad. Some of our senior members came down to the great masterpiece (which is second only to Michelangelo's Sistine Chapel). Gloria Ragovin donated a figure and a half, Abbott Meader supplied his usual "Meader" touch to a few of the figures, Natalie Waldman supplied half a shirt with cuff-links to match (the latter being silently disposed of later on), and Helen Goldberg invaded the domain by "Sauret-ing" a male figure.

Even our faculty had some fun on it. Miss Freinkle and Miss Reiser, a deserter from the Gym Dept., added their little somethings, such as a door, a pile of newspapers and a typist. However, we often found it necessary to go over their work. Soon we accumulated several thick layers of paint which, much to our horror, promptly began to crack and peel.

It was in this stage of near-completion that we showed an ability to give a good "repartee" to the self-appointed art critics who surrounded us.

After two weeks of labor, the actual mural painting was completed. Now it was time to varnish it. With flit gun in hand, and a good supply of lacquer, we proceeded to put the final touches on it. The room and surrounding buildings were soon filled with the fumes of our endeavor. Our mayor, Jay Arbeiter, and mayor-elect Paul Schwaber soon found it necessary to depart along with Mr. Dobren, Mr. Grebanier, Commissioners, etc. After a few days the air was sufficiently cleared so that activities were able to return to normal.

Our work is done, and now as we retreat alone to our fourth floor den we are taken by a warm feeling of satisfaction. Taking one last look at the wall we close the door behind us. Midwood has no choice—it cannot forget us.

THE MARCH OF THE IRON MEN

God only knows what I did to deserve it, but I was a member of the Football Team. During the first reorganization of Extra-Curricular Activities since the strike, our team was presented with Wingate Field as a meeting and practice place. The fieldhouse was a dingy ill-lit place, and always reminded me of a dungeon. The concrete floors were filthy and wet. It was a wonder that the number of "athlete's feet" was not too great, considering the conditions that prevailed. The field was made of rocks, but here and there one could see a blade of grass. I might say however, that Coach Mantrone had a great deal of faith in our ability to play the game.

The following season Midwood got hold of Marine Park for its center of activities.

This field was where you made it. The grass was ankle deep and was considered a luxury to the players. When several feet of this gorgeous stuff was reported missing by the park officials, Mr. M. Cohn started a room by room search for it. When we were tackled, we fell as if on a mattress, and but for a few bear traps, conditions were ideal.

Although we gripe and complain, we are proud of our teams, and as long as Midwood has sports, the student body will support them.

* * * * *

It's a bleak fall day, and as one comes to Wingate Field one can see about 25 Midwood students kicking a hard ball around to each other. This game is called soccer.

Everybody knows of the stars on the football and basketball squad, but do they know of the boys on the soccer team who risk their necks fighting for our school?

On Wednesday and Friday, 25 boys come onto a field with empty stands. There is no band, and not one booster there to cheer them on to victory.

The apathetic attitude taken by the students toward this great sport is not their fault; we are the unsung squad of the school.

And so we, the soccer team, win, lose or draw, and leave at the end of the game with no one but ourselves and our good coach, Mr. Cohn, knowing about the wounds we have received.

* * * *

In September the experts had ear-marked the Midwood quintet for the top. A succession of wins put Midwood way out in front. Then came the unlucky streak which prevented us from eligibility in the play-offs.

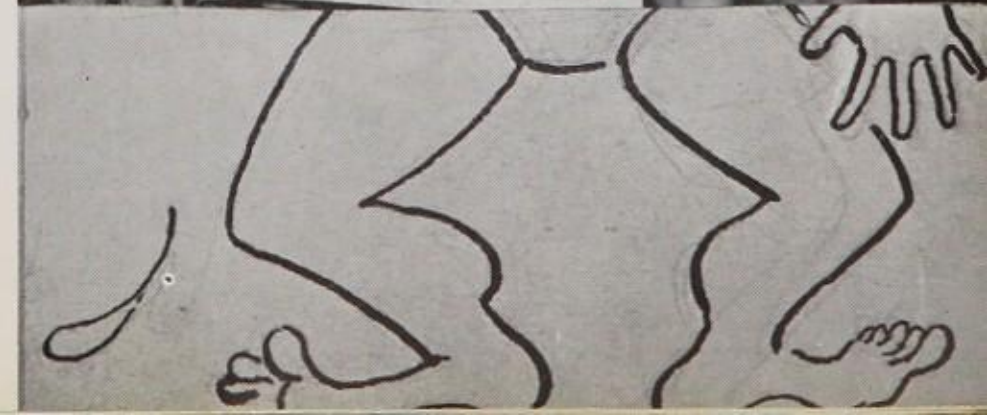

In second place at the start of the second half of the season with Jerry Simmons and Jerry Kass joining Marty "Yogi" Funk, Murry May and Jay Arbeiter on the starting five, the Midmen were unable to find range against the top foes, bowing to Madison and Erasmus once again and to Tilden and thus finishing the season in fourth place.

1952-53 squad leaves quite a record of sportsmanship and spirited aggressiveness which future teams will find difficult to emulate.

* * * *

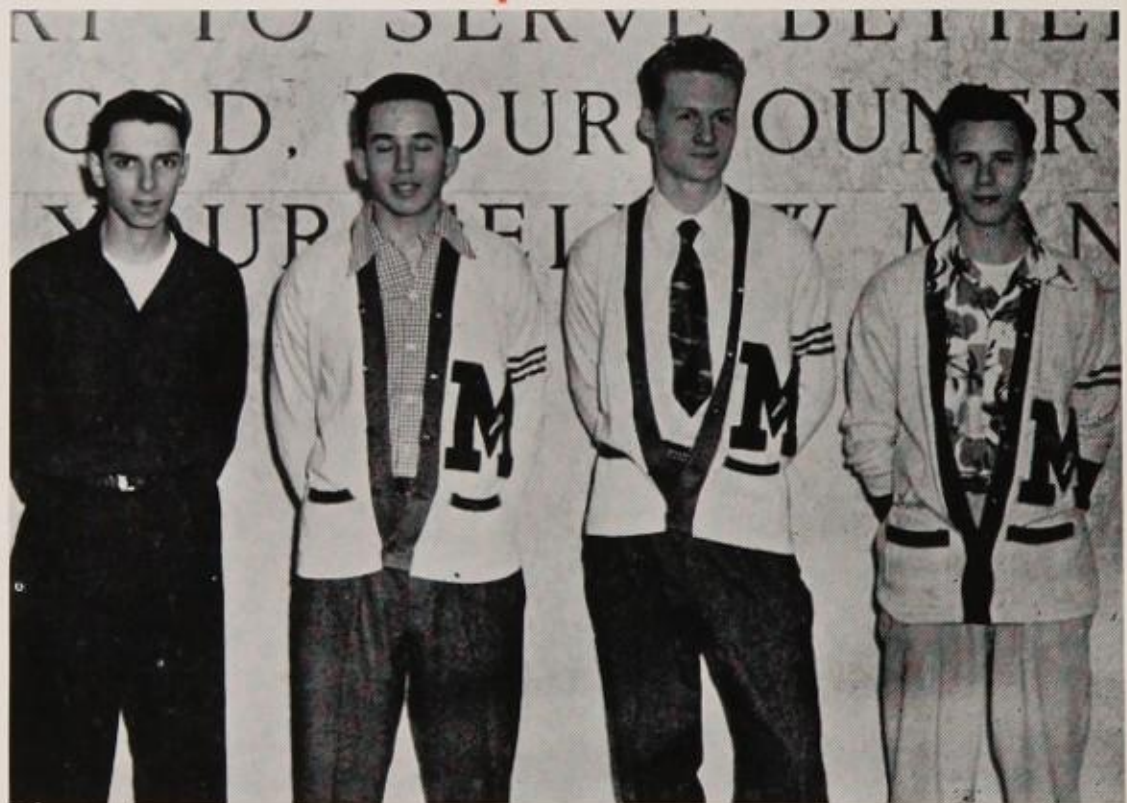

Somewhere along the way, Midwood accumulated a Rifle Team. This aggregation of approximately six steel-nerved, crystal-eyed individuals was presented with the task of measuring up to the championship standards set by the "old" team of the pre-teacher strike days. They were faced with a multiple problem: no range, no coach, no money, no equipment, and astigmatism. Dauntlessly, they shanghaied first Mr. Kasoy, and then Mr. Macolino for coaches. They invested their allowance in equipment, held up the G.O. office, and traveled upon the subway to practice in Manhattan.

They have now developed a solid, well-equipped, and off-time winning team. SELAH. . . .

TEAM IN TRAINING

THE TALE OF TWO CITIES

The other day while working in B71, the hallowed office of our student government, I happened to notice a little Freshman timidly poke his head through the door, take a hurried look around and then scurry out, lost and startled. I couldn't help remembering the days when we, the most active class our school has ever seen, entered our new high school. (Shudder.)

I remember the Freshmen Orientation Commissioner taking us by the hand and showing us the landmarks which made Midwood so famous. We were awed and amazed by the greatness of everything about us. We couldn't imagine just what made all these new marvels tick. Finally we were introduced to the organization responsible for all these wonderful innovations, the City of Midwood, modeled after that other great city we live in.

Many of us became actively involved in all branches of our student government. Others did not find the time to become acquainted with many of its functions. Yet we all realized very shortly that the City of Midwood was the organization that made years at Midwood happy ones.

The days moved rapidly then. We held our first election. How proud we were when we finally had our term represented on the Board of Estimate! Our home room elected presidents and thus we became part of the City Council.

After our Sings, which never would have been the same without the Sing Commission—in fact which never would have been, we had our first election assembly. We met the candidates for Mayor, Comptroller, Secretary, and especially the P.M. Coordinator, who was actually the Mayor of the P.M. session. It was interesting to hear them speak and to find out just what the function of each one was. The candidates vied for our votes desperately—the hopeful mayors promised coke machines, smoking lounges, and swimming pools—while the candidates for comptroller told how we had to watch every penny. Certainly the election assemblies always proved to be of great interest whether the candidates were discussing G.O. taxes or write-in ballots. Allowing us to get up and ask the candidates questions made us really feel "in on things."

We were then introduced to the galaxy of clubs which our government created—clubs branching out into many different fields.

Then we learned about commission commissions and commission commission commissioners, the backbone, ribs and shoulder blades of our G.O. Like the clubs, our commissions varied to a great degree. They ranged from the Welfare Commission, dedicated to help both needy students in school and people throughout the world, to the Recreation Commission which constantly tried to provide amusement and entertainment for us. We became familiarized with the Grievance Commission, which annually gives an award to the person who has the most complaints.

Through the teacher's strike our student government remained strong, constantly trying to overcome the enormous handicap which faced it, and it was successful.

Though it seemed incredible at the time, it is now obvious that the City of Midwood is responsible for all the activities we enjoyed. Our term proved itself an active and interested group. Two of our members became mayors (Paul Schwaber and Jay Arbeiter) and two of them comptrollers (Lucy Rosin and Doris Epstein). Many others became officers and held various offices in B71. It will feel funny for many of our students next year when they can't go down to B71 to argue with the mayor, for a commission meeting, to find out election results, or just to have a chat with one of their friends. The City of Midwood, under the wonderful guidance of Mr. Dobren and Mr. Grebanier, has performed many wonderful duties. It has created a happy home for work and play, discussion and friendship, and has made for all of us, a wonderful haven to remember, MIDWOODLAND, U. S. A.
